1. “When you want to Give up, Remember why you Started”

The above was Dananjaya’s inspirational quote. It’s easy to get caught up in the stress of a moment and lose sight of why we started doing something. Dananjaya talks about how he is often the first to want to give up, but with the support of others and by remembering why he started, he gets the motivation back.

How Does It Apply?

Think about what things in your life are giving you stress and you are thinking about giving up on. Now write down below why you first started doing this. Whenever you feel like giving up, re-read this to try to give you some extra motivation.

2. Get the Basics

Dananjaya explains that speaking is like riding a bike. The only way to get good at it is through practice. The first step to a great speech is understanding what you will be talking about.

How Does It Apply?

First you need to think about your message. Write down below in 10 words what you want your message to be.

From this figure out and write down what your topic is.

Now write down what will be your title.

3. Write your Speech

Dananjaya gives some helpful tips to writing a great and memorable speech. By practicing writing speeches you can only get better.

How Does It Apply?

Try writing your speech down here. Try to keep it to about 750 words (about 5 mins). Consider using

- A rhyming effect in your message to make it more memorable
- Humor (emotion also makes a message memorable)
- Props – they add a little visual interest and also make things stick in the memory
